

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

This large corporation undeniably has a vested interest in George W. Bush being reelected. They will stop at nothing to insure that it happens. Their airing of the anti Kerry documentary violates federal election law for equal time for both candidates. If this blatant election manipulation goes forward, I will join the hundreds of thousands of others who will boycott advertisers and question the reliability and integrity of the FCC.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
